Intellectual Property/Technology
Companies today realize that developing, acquiring and protecting intellectual property rights is more than good business strategy — it's increasingly becoming a matter of commercial survival. With millions and potentially billions of dollars at stake, effectively managing these assets is more than retaining a competitive advantage — it's safeguarding the future.
At Goodwin Procter, our focus is on intellectual property strategy as well as the letter of the law. In today's world, new technology developments and opportunities occur at Internet speed, change is constant, boundaries are often undefined and convergence is the norm In this environment, there is simply no substitute for experienced attorneys with the knowledge and expertise to help navigate uncharted territory.
The Intellectual Property/Technology Practice of Goodwin Procter is one of the firm's fastest growing areas. We have more than 75 attorneys working full time in the areas of intellectual property law and strategy, with strong complements in both the Corporate Department, including patent counsel, and the Litigation Department. Our recent merger with key members of Friedman Siegelbaum LLP, a
